

American Diabetes Association (ADA) Professional Practice Committee for the Standards of Care in Diabetes Application Form

About: The Professional Practice Committee (“PPC”) is an interprofessional expert committee comprised of physicians, physician associates, pharmacists, nurse practitioners, diabetes care and education specialists, registered dietitian nutritionists, behavioral health professionals, and others. The committee’s expertise spans various fields, including but not limited to adult/pediatric endocrinology, primary care, epidemiology, public health, behavioral health, cardiovascular risk management, microvascular complications, nephrology, neurology, ophthalmology, podiatry, clinical pharmacology, preconception and pregnancy care, older adult care, weight management and diabetes prevention, diabetes technology as well as other members of the diabetes care team as appropriate.

The PPC’s primary role is to participate in the development, update, review, approval, and publication of the Standards of Care in Diabetes (“SOC”). In addition to the SOC, the committee oversees the review of ADA’s consensus reports and scientific statements and review external documents for ADA endorsement consideration.

Each year the ADA conducts a National Call for the Professional Practice Committee.

Applications are evaluated based on area of expertise and excellence in leadership, collaboration, communication, writing and editing, commitment to evidence-based practice, and both availability and commitment to the guideline development process. More information may be requested from applicants as necessary and appropriate.

Applications will be accepted by email submission only. See page 7, ‘Submission Instructions,’ under ‘Section VI: References and Submission Instructions,’ for requirements.
